

Agoro Hassan
@hassanconverts

PRICE TALK

SAVE THIS

HOW TO ANSWER "CAN YOU REDUCE THE PRICE?" WITHOUT CUTTING IT.

Agoro Hassan
@hassanconverts

PRICE TALK

WHY THEY ASK

A vague price is an invitation to bargain.

If your price looks like a starting point, it is one.

Market habits come online. Your job is to make the price feel final, and fair.

Agoro Hassan

@hassanconverts

PRICE TALK

TACTICS 1 TO 3

Make it feel final

1

Write the rule once: "The price is fixed. Pay in 2 parts is available." Pin it. Save it as a quick reply.

2

Show the bigger option first. Next to ₦250,000 for 1:1, the ₦75,000 group program feels easy.

3

Give 3 choices, not 1: self paced, group, 1:1. People compare your options, not your price.

Agoro Hassan

@hassanconverts

PRICE TALK

TACTICS 4 TO 6

Make it feel fair

4

Say what's included: live classes, replays, templates, WhatsApp support.

5

Trade, never cut: add a bonus call instead of reducing the price.

6

Walk away kindly: "No wahala. The next cohort opens in January if the timing is better."

Agoro Hassan

@hassanconverts

PRICE TALK

TACTIC 5 IN ACTION

Can you reduce the price small?

8:41 PM

The price is fixed at ~~N~~75,000. But if you join by Friday, I'll add a 1:1 call in week 1.

8:43 PM

Ok. Send the payment link

8:45 PM

You kept your price. They still got a win.

Example chat and price.

Agoro Hassan
@hassanconverts

PRICE TALK

THE RULE

Trade. Never cut.

Give something that costs you little and means a lot to them: a bonus call, early access, a template pack.

Every cut teaches your buyers to ask again.

Agoro Hassan
@hassanconverts

PRICE TALK

YOUR TURN

What do you reply to
"Can you reduce the price?"

Comment your reply. I'll sharpen the first 10.

Save this. Send it to a coach friend.

