

Days 31 to 60 for approval

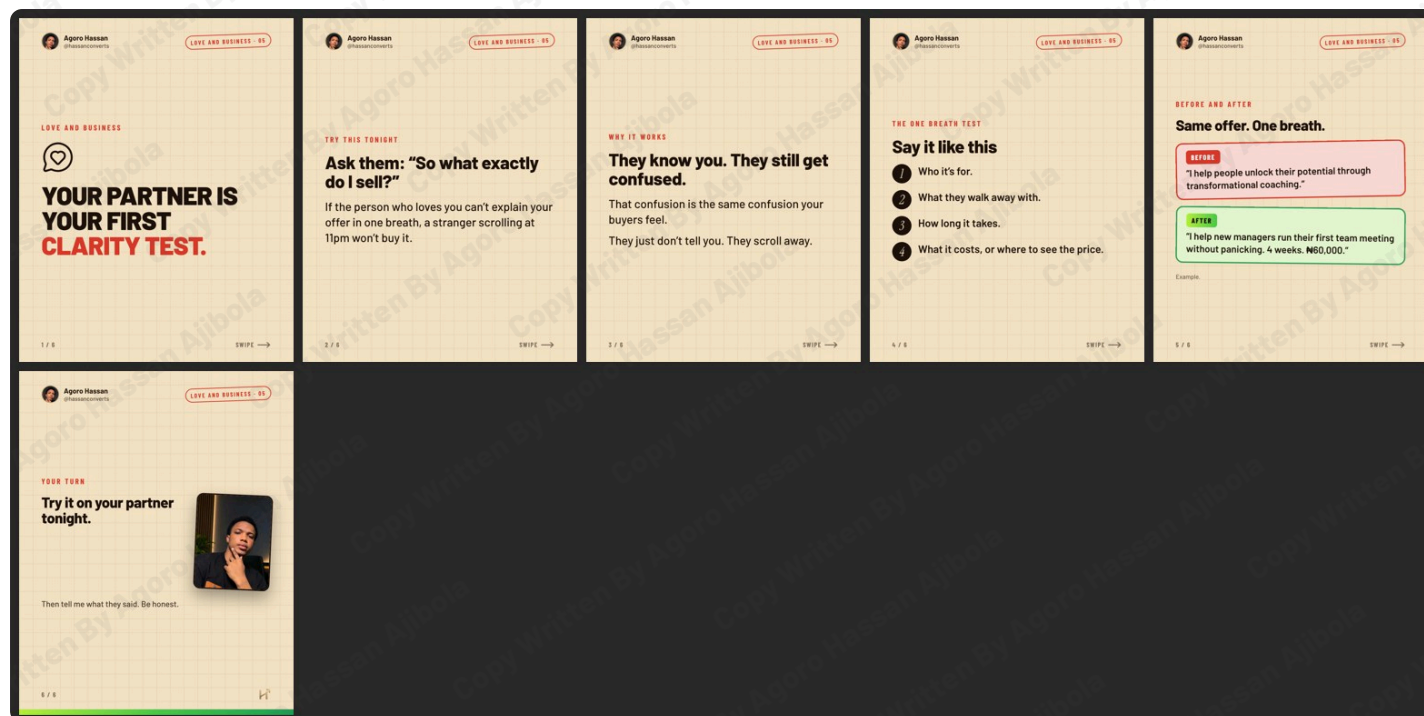

50 new posts in full further down, including the news posts (September news, named as such) and the designed versions of the filming days. Reused posts were approved on 29 Sep and are only moved. Every morning post goes out as a Reel and a TikTok with a beat; every evening post as a carousel plus a TikTok video.

Your partner is your first clarity test.

INSTAGRAM AND TIKTOK CAPTION

Your partner is your first clarity test.

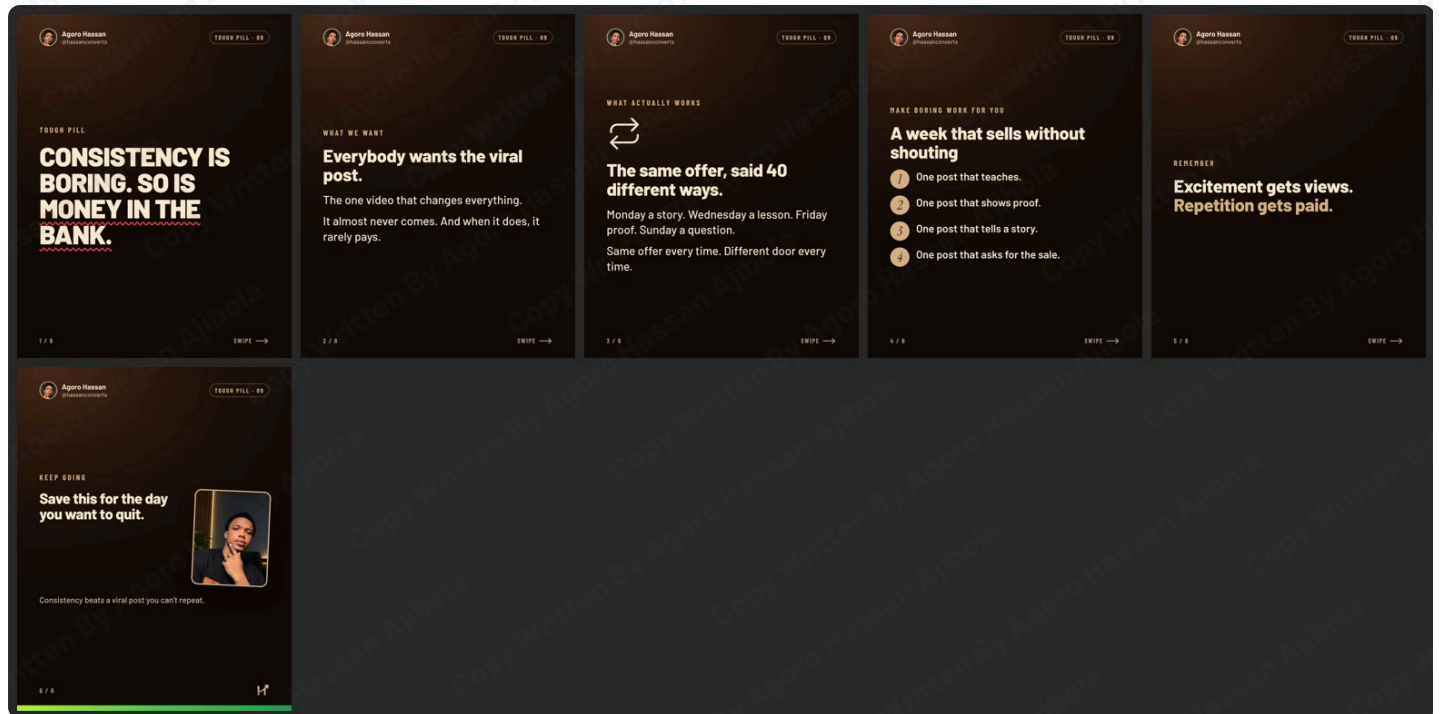

Ask them tonight: "So what exactly do I sell?" If the person who loves you can't explain your offer in one breath, a stranger scrolling at 11pm won't buy it.

The one breath test: who it's for, what they walk away with, how long it takes, what it costs.

Try it, then tell me what they said. Be honest.

What I do before I write a single word.

INSTAGRAM AND TIKTOK CAPTION

What I do before I write a single word.

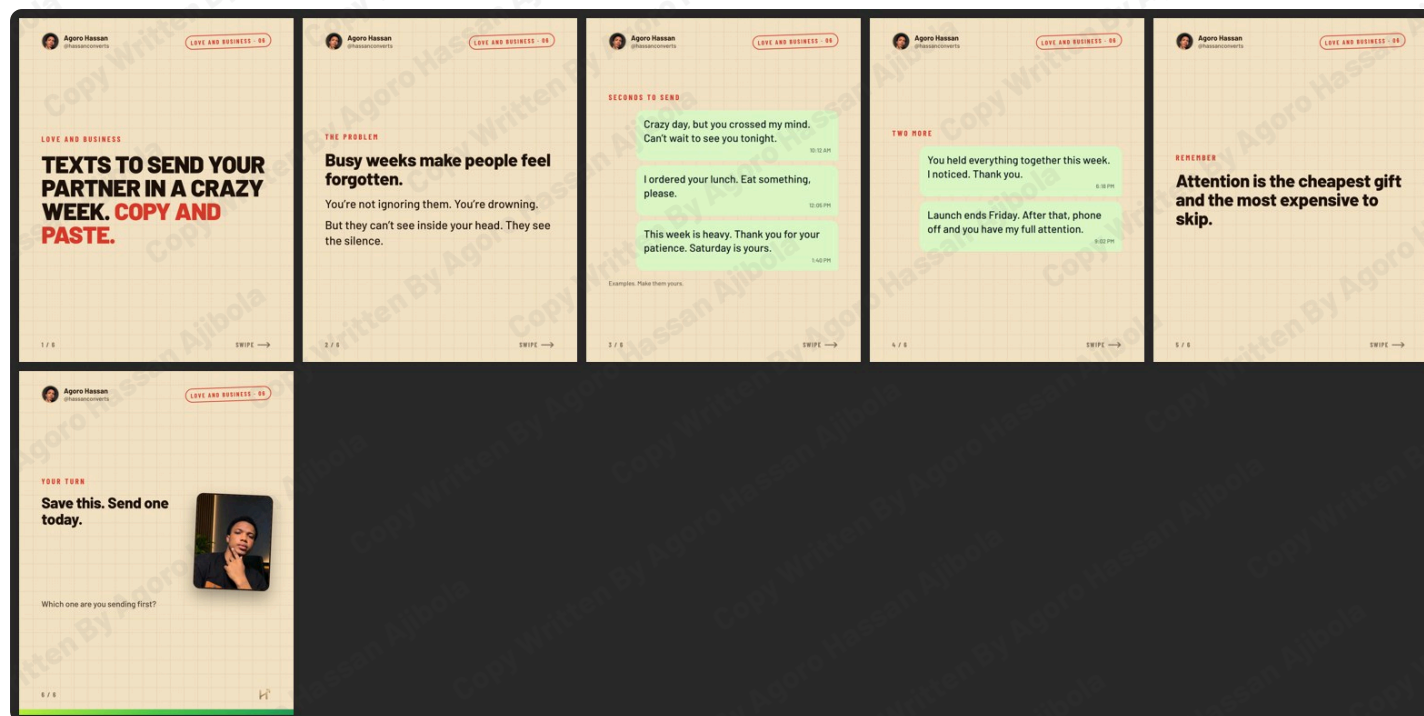

Most copy starts with the writer's ideas. Mine starts with the buyer's words: DMs, comments, reviews, competitor pages, and how buyers describe the problem in voice notes.

The best line is usually already written. A buyer said it. My job is to notice it.

Comment PAGE and I'll tell you the one line I'd change first on yours.

Lagos traffic teaches patience. Your business needs the same.

INSTAGRAM AND TIKTOK CAPTION

Lagos traffic teaches patience. Your business needs the same.

Nobody turns back at Ojota because the traffic is heavy. But three weeks of posting with no sales, and we change the offer, the logo, the niche. Back to the start of the traffic again.

Keep the offer 90 days. Change one thing at a time. Count what happens. Slow is not the same as stuck.

How many weeks have you been posting? Comment the number.

Nobody turns back at Ojota because the traffic is heavy. You wait, you inch forward, you get there.

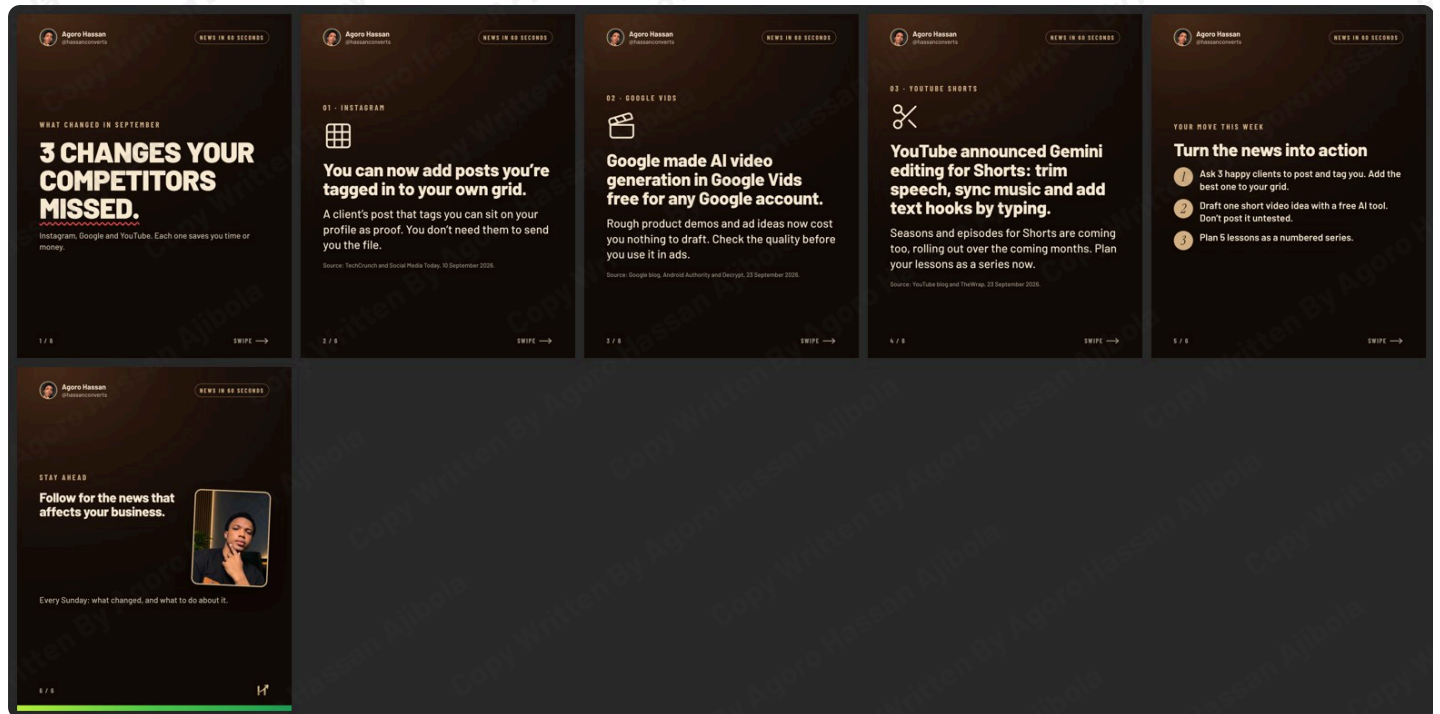

With a business, three weeks of posting and no sales is often enough for people to change the offer, the logo, even the niche. And they're back at the start of the traffic.

What works better:

1. Keep the same offer for 90 days
2. Change one thing at a time: the hook, the price, the page
3. Count what happens after each change
4. Talk to 10 people who almost bought

Slow is not the same as stuck.

3 changes your competitors missed.

INSTAGRAM AND TIKTOK CAPTION

3 changes your competitors missed in September:

1. Instagram now lets you add posts you're tagged in to your own grid (TechCrunch, 10 Sept).
2. Google made AI video generation in Google Vids free for any Google account (Google blog, 23 Sept).
3. YouTube announced Gemini editing for Shorts, plus seasons and episodes, rolling out over the coming months (YouTube blog, 23 Sept).

Watch for what to do with each one this week.

Three platform changes from September that most small businesses missed:

1. Instagram now lets you add posts you're tagged in to your own profile grid. A client's post that tags you can sit on your page as proof (TechCrunch, Social Media Today, 10 September).
2. Google made AI video generation in Google Vids free for anyone with a Google account (Google blog, 23 September). Useful for drafting demos and ad ideas; check quality before using it in ads.
3. YouTube announced Gemini editing for Shorts (trim speech, sync music and add text hooks by typing) and seasons and episodes for Shorts, rolling out over the coming months (YouTube blog, 23 September).

Which one will you use first?

A big copywriter I respect sent me a job link. My portfolio was good. The job post said: start your proposal with the word FUNNEL, in capital letters. It was their test to see who read everything.

I read it. I understood it. I forgot it. I opened with my pitch instead.

The small instruction is the test. Your buyers do it too: one simple question in the DM. Answer that question first, then pitch.

WHAT TO SAY (ABOUT 40 SECONDS)

I lost a five hundred dollar job because of one word.

A big copywriter I respect sent me a job link. My portfolio was good. I knew I could do the work.

The job post said: start your proposal with the word FUNNEL, in capital letters. It was their test, to see who actually read everything.

Discount or bonus? Do the math before you slash your price.

INSTAGRAM AND TIKTOK CAPTION

Discount or bonus? Do the math before you slash your price.

Example: a ₦75,000 program at 30% off loses ₦22,500 on every sale. Sell 10 and you've given away ₦225,000. And buyers learn to wait for your next sale.

A bonus that costs you time, not cash (a review call, a template pack) keeps your price and still gives a reason to buy now.

Comment MATH and I'll check your Black Friday offer.

Black Friday question worth doing the math on: discount or bonus?

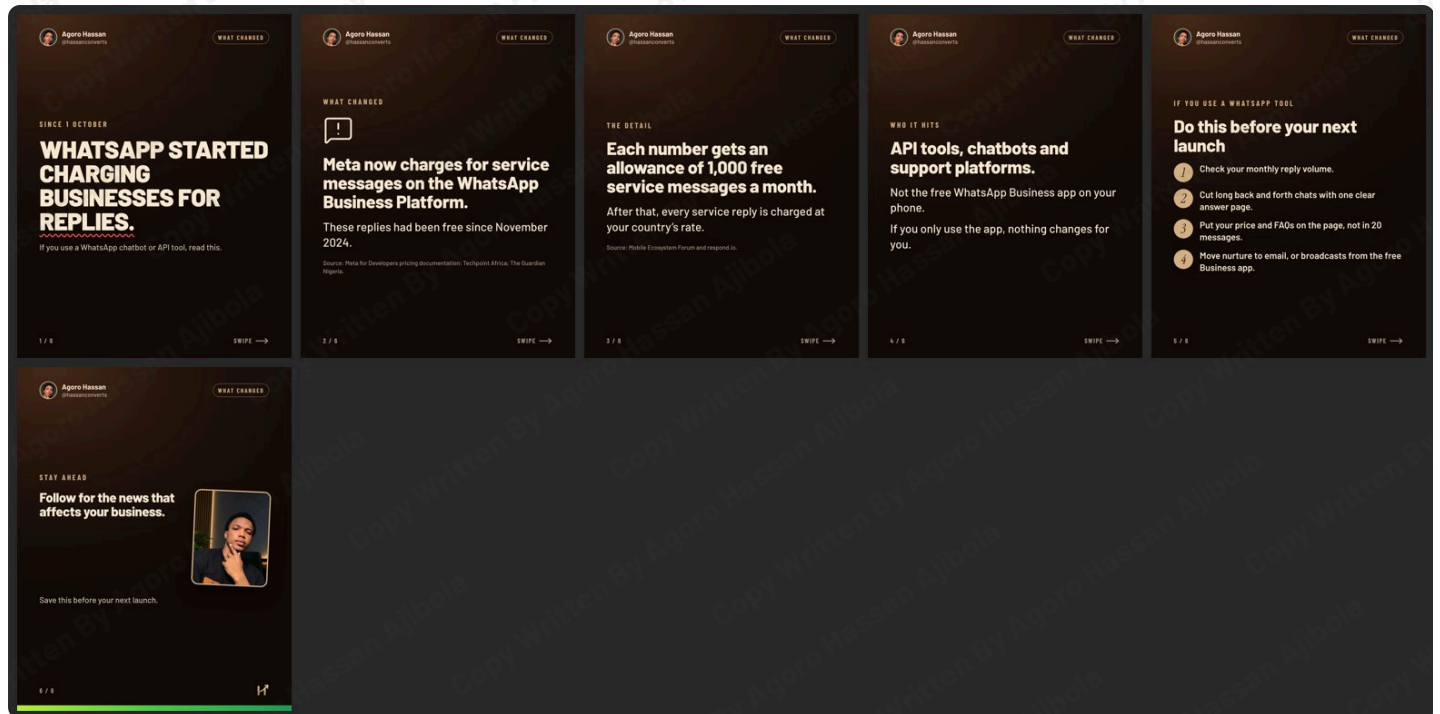

Example: a ₦75,000 program at 30% off loses ₦22,500 on every sale. Ten sales and ₦225,000 has been given away. Buyers also learn to wait for the next sale, and the full price starts to look too high.

A bonus that costs time rather than cash (a review call, a template pack) keeps the price intact and still gives a reason to buy before the deadline.

A good bonus: costs little to deliver, is worth a lot to the buyer, speeds up their result, and disappears after the deadline.

Protect the price. Add value instead.

WhatsApp started charging businesses for replies.

INSTAGRAM AND TIKTOK CAPTION

Since 1 October, WhatsApp charges businesses for replies on the WhatsApp Business Platform.

Meta now charges for service messages, which had been free since November 2024 (Meta for Developers). Each number gets 1,000 free service messages a month, then replies are charged at country rates (Mobile Ecosystem Forum, respond.io).

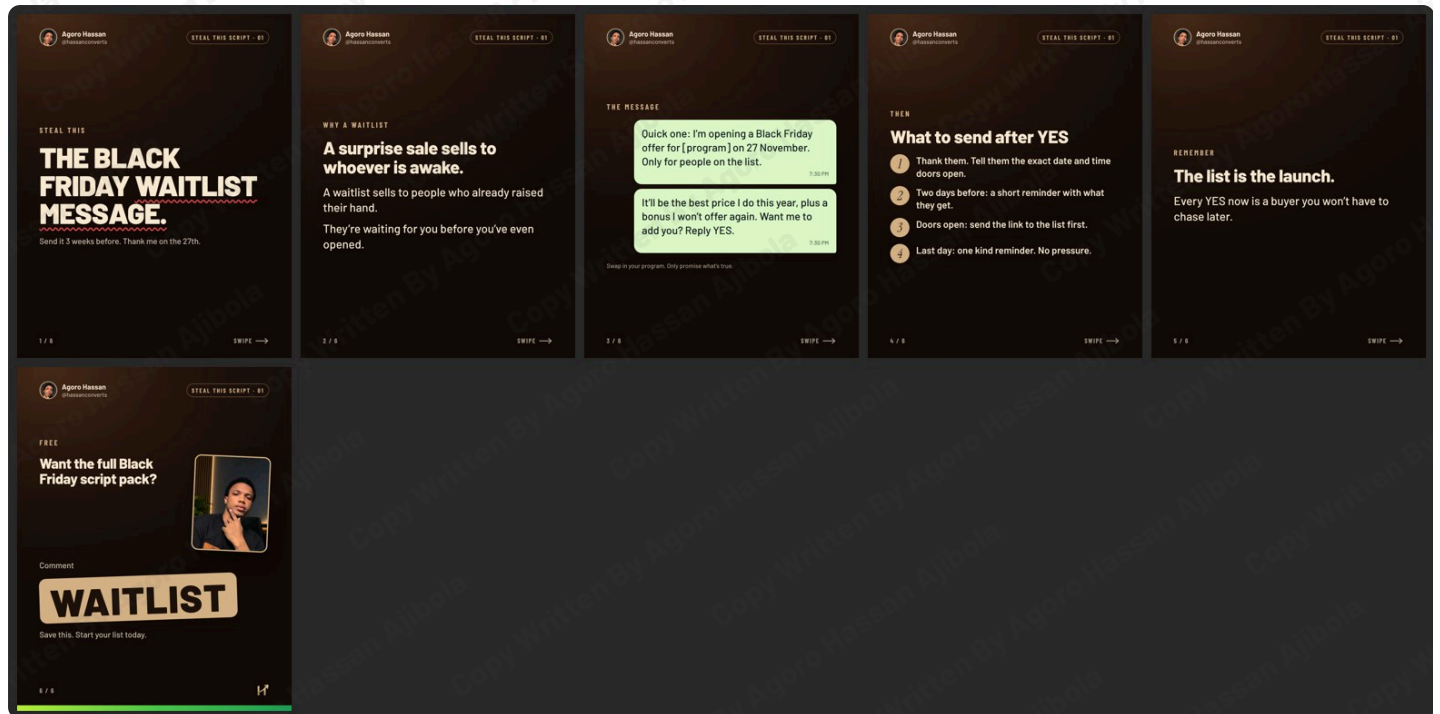

This hits API tools and chatbots, not the free WhatsApp Business app on your phone.

If you use a tool: check your volume and put your price and FAQs on one page instead of 20 messages.

A surprise sale sells to whoever is awake. A waitlist sells to people who already raised their hand.

Send it 3 weeks before: "I'm opening a Black Friday offer for [program] on 27 November. Only for people on the list. Best price I do this year, plus a bonus I won't offer again. Reply YES and I'll add you."

Comment WAITLIST for the follow up messages.

A Black Friday tip that works better than a surprise sale: open a waitlist three weeks before.

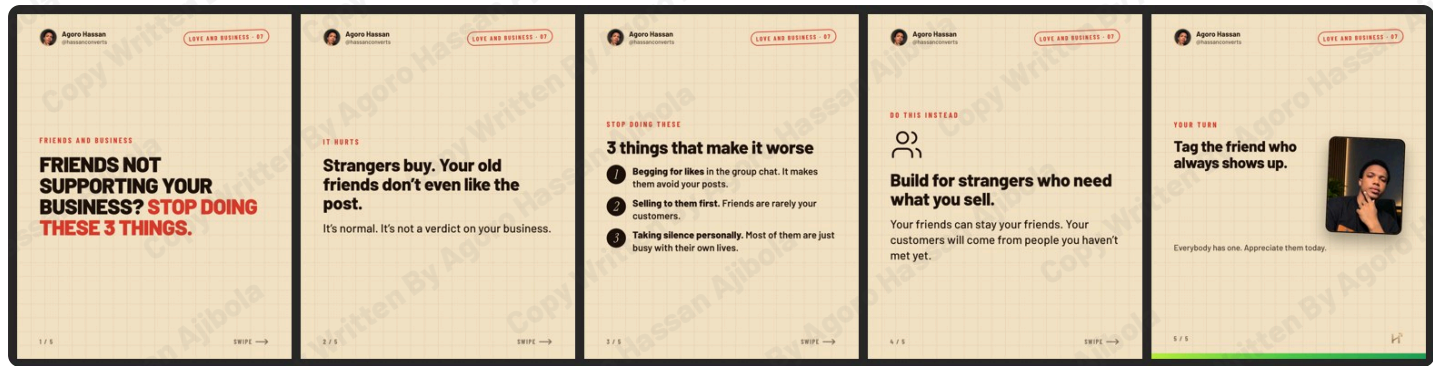

A surprise sale sells to whoever happens to be awake. A waitlist sells to people who already raised their hand.

The message: "I'm opening a Black Friday offer for [program] on 27 November, only for people on the list. It'll be the best price I do this year, plus a bonus I won't offer again. Want me to add you? Reply YES."

Then: thank them with the exact opening time, remind them two days before, send the link to the list first, and one kind reminder on the last day.

The list is the launch.

In most small businesses, the one that follows up wins, not the one that's best.

After a buyer asks "How much?", life happens: they get busy, salary is late, they forget. The best provider who never follows up loses to the second best who does.

3 numbers that should change your Black Friday prices.

INSTAGRAM AND TIKTOK CAPTION

3 numbers from September that should shape your Black Friday prices:

1. Inflation eased to 15.39% in August, from 23.14% a year earlier (NBS via Nairametrics).
2. The CBN cut its benchmark rate from 26.5% to 23% (22 Sept). Nearly a week later, banks hadn't passed it on.
3. The naira held around ₦1,327 to ₦1,330 per dollar in September (Nairametrics).

Buyers are still careful. Lead with results and payment plans, not deep discounts.

Three numbers from September worth thinking about before setting Black Friday prices in Nigeria:

1. Headline inflation eased to 15.39% in August, from 23.14% a year earlier (NBS, via Nairametrics and Premium Times). Prices are still rising, just more slowly.
2. The CBN cut the monetary policy rate from 26.5% to 23% on 22 September (Nairametrics, Tribune). Nearly a week later, banks had not passed the cut on to lending rates.
3. The naira held in a narrow band of about ₦1,327 to ₦1,330 per dollar through September (Nairametrics).

Buyers remain price conscious. Leading with results and payment plans will likely serve better than deep discounts. Worth checking the newest figures before you post prices.

For some Facebook Pages, link posts are becoming a paid feature.

Meta launched Meta One on 15 September: paid business plans from $14.99 a month (Meta newsroom, Forbes). The Advanced plan includes "links in organic posts and reels", and some Pages are in a test that limits link posts to two a month (Social Media Today).

Renting your audience is getting more expensive. Build roads you own: DMs, WhatsApp numbers, emails.

How to say sorry when work made you miss something important.

Not “You know how busy I am.” That’s a defence, not an apology.

Then keep the promise. An apology without a change is just a speech.
