Here's the sales page for [a coach's] new ROI program....can anyone look at this sales page and tell me ONE thing you'll actually learn?!

Is the sales page word salad or actually listing tangible results?

WHAT THEY WANT

“Tell me ONE thing I’ll actually learn.”

Not transformation. Not “unlock your potential”.

One concrete thing.

EXAMPLE

Word salad vs a real promise

WORD SALAD

"Unlock your full potential and step into your next level with our transformational program."

REAL PROMISE

"In 4 weeks you'll write and send your first 3 sales emails, with my feedback on each."

Example lines.

THE WORD SALAD TEST

Check every section

- 1 Could a stranger say what they'll get after reading it?
- 2 Is there a number: weeks, lessons, a price?
- 3 Is there proof: a real student, a screenshot, a sample?
- 4 Would you say this sentence out loud to a friend?

THE RULE

One concrete promise per section.

Specific sounds honest.

Vague sounds like a scam.
